They would ride 1,000 miles

A TEAM of cyclists from Farnham has ridden 1,000 miles in 100 hours to raise money for Phyllis Tuckwell Hospice and Challengers and to buy a defibrillator for Hale as part of Farnham Lions' Heartstart Campaign.

The riders, led by Paul Head, split into teams, each riding 1,000 miles, day and night, over 100 hours. Their route took them from Farnham up towards North Wales, down the Welsh coast, on into Dorset and then back along to Bristol, Bath and Winchester.

After being waved off by well-wishers at their starting point in Castle Street, Farnham, on June 24, their ride was timed to return to Farnham on Saturday, June 28, just before the carnival procession began its parade through town.

"This was an incredible endeavour," said hospice CEO Sarah Brocklebank. "Their enthusiasm was infectious and we are so grateful for their contribution to the work we do in our local community."

The cyclists had a dedicated support team and were accompanied by a vehicle and support driver. With sponsorship and technical backup teams tracking their progression from Farnham, everyone contributed to the success.

The event was self-financed by those who took part, so all proceeds will go directly to the three charities. Anyone wishing to donate may do so by visiting www.justgiving.com/farnham1000in100
